THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, MARCH 30, 1897.

The News.

Many efforts have been made to break down the prestige of the Associated Press, the greatest news gatherer the world has seen. The most promising effort seemed to be that organized under the title of the United Press. It seemed for a time that this concern was making headway. Its temporary success was due to bluff on the one hand and the lavish promises of the promoters on the other. It had run along for several years and seemed to be making money for its promoters.

To-day there is little left of it. It is practically dead and is said to be about $200,000 in the hole. The New York Herald Tribune and Times, its mainstays in New York City have dropped out of it and during the past week sixty-eight newspapers in New England took the same track. There is hardly enough of it left to hold an inquest on.

The papers that left the United Press have been glad to get into the Associated Press. The United Press was organized to make money for the men who conceived the idea. The Associated Press is conducted to furnish the news service to its stockholders and patrons. If profit results it comes to the newspaper as such, not as stockholders in the association.

In other words the Associated Press is co-operative, existing for the benefit of the newspapers attached to it. It has never made the mistake of the United Press, which sought to corner the news market. It has gone on driving down its market deep and fast, throwing out its line in every direction until no part of the globe is without its Associated Press representative, gathering the news of the day promptly and with absolute impartiality.

This has kept the Associated Press strong in the face of all of the assaults that have been made upon it, and while its most promising rival lies dead, the Associated Press is stronger to-day than at any time in its history. Readers of the Intelligence have always had the benefit of the Associated Press news service.

Democrats and the Tariff.

The Democrats in the house of representatives are doing a good deal of talking and give promise of keeping up their lick to the end. Fortunately, under the rules of the house and the gavel of Speaker Reed, all of this will have to end at the time fixed, namely on Wednesday of this week, and then the vote will be taken and the bill will pass the house.

For any effect the Democratic oratory could have on the house it might as well have been kept in stock, but the house is not the objective point. The Democratic plan is to lay up a goodly store of tariff reading for the next campaign, so that the able orators who go out on the stump to talk free trade may have an abundance of ammunition within easy reach.

It is hardly necessary to go to the trouble of preparing and delivering, or printing without delivering, these speeches. All that was necessary was to go back to the debate over the McKinley bill. In that discussion the free traders laid down all the internal principles to be found in their text-books and made enough oleaginous prophecies to last a generation. Their prophecies were not verified, but that makes no difference. The prophecies being made now will not come true, and one set of false prophecies is as good as another.

We do not wish it to be understood that we are complaining of the plan of campaign of our friends the enemy. On the whole we like it, but it occurred to us to remark in passing that it represented for now and the near future an elaborate waste of time. The country has swung over to the Republican side and will not swing back in the election of 1898.

The Art of Dining.

Prof. Max Muller, the eminent scientist, who knows about a great many things, especially the subtle intricacies of language, criticizes severely the dinner-giving custom of the English speaking peoples. Prof. Muller has had experience chiefly in England, where, as we understand, English is spoken, but where dining and giving dinners are practiced a little differently from the American way.

American dinners are often stupid enough, but we doubt whether our best American society is ever so boorish in its dining as the same relative grade is in the mother country. There are dinners given in America not so much for the pleasure of having friends at the table and for giving them pleasure, as because it is thought the thing to do to keep in the swim. In this country, however, there is always a pretense of making a dinner agreeable. The host or hostess tries to select persons who are congenial and endeavors in all possible ways to add to their pleasure.

Unless our British cousins are greatly wronged a swell dinner given by one of the fast set resembles more a "feed" than a dinner party. The guests seem to understand that their company is particularly desired and does not give special pleasure to the host or hostess, that in short, they are there because the time is thought to have arrived to pay on some social obligation.

It is because English dinners are in this vein that Prof. Muller suggests their abandonment, as functions in their nature barbarous and out of line with our modern civilization. We are quite willing for our English friends to abandon their dinners, or to have more of them, or to make them suffer and more boorish than they are.

As for our own American dinner, that is an institution which we shall not willingly see perish. It may be the fruitful parent of some great and good deal of dyspepsia, but it brings with it a good deal of good fellowship along with the good cheer, and we Americans cannot live without dining.

Tariffs in the Senate.

While the house is discussing the tariff bill the finance committee of the senate is at work on the same measure. The senate will propose many amendments to the house bill, and since this is to be done it is well that the senate is at work so that it may have its amendments ready to present without necessary delay.

After those amendments shall be proposed there will be delay enough, for the senate does not move rapidly and under its rules there is no way to force a vote. Views vary as to the time when the senate may wind up its discussions of the tariff question. By some it is thought that more than a month will be consumed in debate. Other predictions carry it to two months.

Unless opposing senators shall agree that they have nothing to gain by trying to talk the bill to death, it is probable that the bill may go to the conference committee within six weeks. This would give sufficient talking time to everybody in the senate who wishes to discuss the matter and would make it probable that that bill can become a law within two months at the furthest.

Seeing how much time has been devoted to tariff bills in the past this will be doing pretty well and the country would have reason to congratulate itself.

More Hydrophobia.

A boy in Lancaster, Pa., bitten by a dog three weeks ago, has died of hydrophobia. There are those who insist that there is no such thing as hydrophobia. All the same persons die after being bitten by dogs, and about all of them have the same symptoms.

Something caused the death of the young man of this city bitten some time ago by a dog, and the physicians think it would be well for others who were bitten by the same animal to go to the Pasteur Institute in New York for treatment. The subscription opened for this purpose and reported daily in the Intelligence grows, but not fast enough.

If these persons are to be helped they should be helped at once. They are not able to defray their own expenses and their cases appeal to the well-disposed who have means. Certainly there is enough charity in Wheeling to come to the relief. The money is here. Human life is very dear.

French Journalism.

A French newspaper discovers that Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland have agreed to separate, because Mr. Cleveland beat his wife and wiped up the floor with her. These gymnastic performances are understood by our Gallic contemporaries to be the climax of a series of disagreements in consequence of which Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland had really not lived together for some time before leaving the white house.

It is evident that the French press does not know everything. Among other things it does not know that Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland have settled down in a handsome home in Princeton, N. J. There are a few other things which do not seem to have been revealed to the French press, but this is one of our crowded days and we have no space to print very much of all that the French press does not know about American matters.

An Onion Trust.

A Kansas City man has formed himself into a trust and proceeded with great ability to corner the onion market. He has gathered in all the onions within reach and caused almost a doubling of the price.

The name of the onion king so recently crowned is James McKinney, the first of his line and perhaps destined to have a numerous progeny of onion princes and princesses. We have all sorts of trusts and combinations to limit production and to control transportation, all with a view of holding down competition and putting up prices.

Of all of these objectionable undertakings the onion trust is distinctly the rankest.

A Sign of Progress.

The sultan of Morocco forbids the annual pilgrimage to Mecca, because of the plague that lies along the route taken by the pilgrims. This has never been done before in the history of Morocco. No matter what the danger from the plague may have been, the faithful Moslem who wanted to go to Mecca and no Moslem ruler thought of trying to stop him.

The Moslem pilgrimages have slain their hundreds of thousands by scattering the seeds of the plague. When the sultan of Morocco interposes in a matter of this kind it is another proof that the world moves.

Hawaiian newspapers are devoting a great deal of their space to annexation. They want it known that the country wants to get under Uncle Sam's wing and is impatient of delay. The sooner the flag of the United States is raised over Hawaii, to be hauled down no more forever, the better. Other countries are prospecting in that direction.

It is announced that the administration intends to treat sound money Democrats fairly. Most of them were quick to say after the victory that they did not wish the reward of office. There is very good understanding between the administration and the Democrats who helped to knock out Bryanism.

Except Pittsburgh, Senator Quay seems to be gathering in everything in Pennsylvania. Why not make in unanimous and usher in an "era of good feeling"?

Col. John L. Sullivan, having achieved distinction as correspondent for a great New York newspaper, is understood to
